A MESSAGE FROM

CHIEF JUSTICE CLIFFORD W. TAYLOR

CHIEF JUSTICE
CLIFFORD W. TAYLOR

In reviewing the judicial branch's achievements of 2005, I am reminded of the words of Francis Bacon: "He that will not apply new remedies must expect new evils; for time is the greatest innovator." In the same spirit, Michigan's courts not only addressed the concerns of 2005, but anticipated future challenges.

In June, for example, the Supreme Court hired the first Trial Court Security Specialist. A generation ago—pre-September 11 and pre-Hurricane Katrina—it would have seemed unnecessary to do so. Today, our branch of government knows that it must be prepared for everything from natural disasters to terrorist attacks. Accordingly, through this new position, the Supreme Court offers trial courts services ranging from analyzing courthouse security to safety training for judges and court staff. For the first time, trial court security and emergency services coordinators could communicate quickly and effectively through an e-mail Listserv. Initial planning began on a Continuity of Operations Plan (COOP), which is aimed at helping courts function in disasters.

The judicial branch also looked to the future through a number of technology initiatives, including the Judicial Network Project, a four-year effort which was completed in 2005. Through this project, nearly all felony dispositions in Michigan are now reported electronically from the courts to the Michigan State Police and Secretary of State. Law enforcement benefits by this reporting, which allows courts to update criminal history information daily and often immediately. Another statewide project, the Judicial Data Warehouse, is in process; the data warehouse would collect information about all pending and closed cases in state courts. Still other projects explored electronic filing of court documents and online payment of traffic tickets.

Educating the public about the judicial branch remained a top priority, as did continuing education for judges and court staff. But technology added a new twist, as the Internet played an ever more dominant role in communications. So, for example, the Michigan Judicial Institute, the Court's educational division, expanded its use of web-based training, while the "Michigan Courts" website was redesigned to make it easier for the public to use.

These and other achievements of Michigan's judicial branch are highlighted in this annual report, which I invite you to read. We have also included statistics about our courts' activities and caseloads. More detailed information is available at <http://www.courts.mi.gov/scao/resources/publications/reports/statistics.htm#annual>.

CHILD WELFARE SERVICES

As of December 2005, there were almost 19,000 children in Michigan's child welfare system due to abuse or neglect. Child Welfare Services (CWS), a division of the State Court Administrative Office (SCAO), helps courts address the needs of these children and their families. The division's responsibilities include training judges and court staff, helping courts expedite permanent placements for children, and monitoring a special court docket for missing foster children. CWS also supports events that educate the public about child welfare issues, such as Michigan Adoption Day.

MICHIGAN ADOPTION DAY

In Michigan, thousands of foster children lack permanent homes. As of December 31, 2005, there were 12,316 children who were temporary court wards in Michigan as a result of child protective proceedings. As of the same date, there were 18,959 children in foster care in Michigan. For most children in foster care, the goal is returning to a safe and stable home. But a significant number of children (4,455 as of December 31, 2005) are permanent court wards with a goal of adoption. To draw attention to their plight, and to educate the public about the adoption process, the Michigan Supreme Court co-sponsored the third annual Michigan Adoption Day on November 22, 2005. According to National Adoption Day organizers, Michigan Adoption Day was the largest such event in the nation for the third straight year. Forty-four counties participated and 276 children were adopted. The adoption ceremonies included parties for the adopted children and their families, gifts for the children, and informational sessions for the public.

CHILDREN'S COMMUNITY SUPPORT NETWORK

Unfortunately, statistics indicate that, after age 11, the likelihood that a foster child will be adopted drops dramatically. As of December 2005, there were 3,402 children aged 16 and older in foster care. Most of these children will simply "age out" of the foster care system. Over half of "aged-out" former foster children will find themselves back in the court system within two years, and they are at high risk for substance abuse, teen pregnancy, poverty, and other negative outcomes.

To address this problem, the Children's Community Support Network (CCSN) was launched on Michigan Adoption Day 2004. Throughout 2005, CCSN identified volunteers and matched them with the needs of various organizations, such as the Department of Human Services (DHS, formerly known as the Family Independence Agency), private child service organizations, and the courts. The CCSN pilot provided useful information, and CWS, the Michigan Supreme Court, and DHS continue to collaborate on resources for youth aging out of the foster care system.

FEDERAL REVIEWS

Michigan could lose millions of dollars in foster care funding, depending on the outcome of federal reviews. In March 2004, Michigan underwent a federal audit regarding administration of the Title IV-E Program, which provides states with federal funding for foster care programs for abused or neglected children. In 2004, Michigan received approximately $248 million in Title IV-E funds; the state received a similar amount in 2005. Michigan failed both the March 2004 audit and a 2002 audit performed by the federal Department of Child and Family Services. The state is appealing those audit findings, but could lose a significant amount of foster care funding if it does not pass the next round of reviews.

Since 2004, CWS has collaborated with DHS to address issues raised in the federal reviews and on the appeal of the audits. CWS and DHS have also worked together on training court staff and others to meet federal foster care requirements. In 2005, CWS provided statewide training to over 2,500 people to improve the state's compliance with federal requirements. The Michigan Supreme Court and CWS also met regularly with DHS throughout 2005 regarding their pending appeal of some federal audit findings.

In 2004, Governor Granholm signed legislation that addresses requirements in the Title IV-E regulations. In 2005, a workgroup that included a CWS representative focused on drafting court order forms to comport with the language in federal regulations and the new legislation. The revised court order forms will be distributed in January 2006.

CHILDREN ABSENT WITHOUT LEGAL PERMISSION

Circuit courts throughout Michigan have special dockets for foster children who are missing from their court-ordered placements, often referred to as Absent Without Legal Permission (AWOLP). In 2005, 753 children were reported missing, including 89 who were missing twice and 13 who were missing three times. In 78 percent of the cases, the child was located. Several courts have been especially innovative in locating missing children and addressing their needs, including the reasons they run away from foster care. In 2005, CWS began collecting information about locating these missing children and will provide best practices resources in 2006 to assist the courts.

FOSTER CARE REVIEW BOARD

CWS oversees the Foster Care Review Board Program (FCRB), which the Legislature created in 1985 to review cases of abused or neglected children in foster care. FCRB volunteers provide an objective look at the roles that the courts, DHS, and private agencies play in the system. FCRB also makes findings and recommendations about permanency planning and presents these recommendations to the judicial, executive, and legislative branches. In addition, local boards hold appeal hearings when foster parents object to removal of children from the foster home.

In 2005, FCRB conducted approximately 2,400 reviews affecting 1,900 children. Also in 2005, FCRB received 120 phone requests for appeals and conducted 83 appeals. Program representatives reconciled the remaining appeals without hearings. FCRB volunteers in Wayne County also conducted over 250 permanency reviews of judicial compliance with the Adoptions and Safe Families Act and federal funding regulations. Reviews will continue through January 2006.

COURT IMPROVEMENT PROGRAM

In child protective cases, the goal is to either reunite the child with the family or find the child another permanent home. If courts are not functioning properly, children simply languish in the system. The Court Improvement Program, which is supported by federal funds, assesses Michigan courts' handling of child protection cases. An initial assessment of the courts was completed in 1997; the reassessment was completed in June 2005. As a result of these assessments, the Michigan Supreme Court, CWS, and DHS have formed work groups to address key issues, such as barriers to adoption, the role of the lawyer-guardian ad litem (attorney representing the child in child protection proceedings), permanency plans for older children, and child welfare training.

ABSENT PARENT PROTOCOL

The Absent Parent Protocol was developed in 2003 to address the large number of child protection cases where only one parent is involved in the court proceedings. The protocol, which was developed through collaboration with the Michigan Judicial Institute,

ABSENT PARENT PROTOCOL CONTINUED

CWS, and the Friend of the Court Bureau, was updated in 2004 and 2005 to clarify issues related to the definition of legal fathers, formalize a new partnership with the Office of Child Support, and address concerns raised by DHS. The updated protocol was distributed to courts and service providers throughout Michigan in late 2005; training will take place through 2006.

LAWYER-GUARDIAN AD LITEM TRAINING

In 2005, CWS continued to offer training to lawyer guardians ad litem (L-GAL); 2005 topics included federal foster care funding regulations and educational issues for foster care children. The 2005 training grew out of a 2003 protocol created by SCAO and the Governor's Task Force on Children's Justice; the protocol shaped the L-GAL curriculum created by CWS and the Michigan Judicial Institute in 2004. CWS has trained over 700 L-GALs from 60 counties.

FRIEND OF THE COURT BUREAU

Michigan's Friend of the Court (FOC) offices enforce court orders regarding custody, parenting time, and support. The Friend of the Court Bureau (FOCB), a division of SCAO, works with and on behalf of the 65 FOC offices in Michigan's 83 counties. Some FOC offices serve two or more counties in the same judicial circuit.

MICHIGAN'S CHILD SUPPORT COLLECTION PERFORMANCE

The federal Office of Child Support Enforcement, which reviewed all states' child support collections for FY 2004, reported in 2005 that Michigan's 2004 distributed child support collections totaled $1,414,387,902, placing Michigan fourth highest in the United States behind California, Ohio, and Texas. Michigan also ranked third in the collection and distribution of past due child support (the child support arrearage), trailing only California and Texas.

In 2005, thanks to a collaboration between the courts and the Michigan Office of Child Support (a division of DHS), the Financial Institution Data Match (FIDM) program collected $12,554,652.99 in past due support, significantly reducing Michigan's child support arrearage. FIDM uses a statewide computer system, known as the Michigan Child Support Enforcement System (MiCSES), to locate the bank accounts of parents who have failed to pay support. FIDM not only helps custodial parents and children; it also increases Michigan's share of federal "incentive" funding, which is awarded on the basis of each state's overall success in child support collections.

THE MICHIGAN CHILD SUPPORT ENFORCEMENT SYSTEM (MiCSES)

As reported in the 2004 Annual Report, a major goal for FY 2005 was improving MiCSES to better serve its users' needs. There was no funding for this effort, however. In fact, the FY 2005 appropriation for MiCSES was cut to a level that permitted nothing more than maintenance of the system and compliance with new legislative requirements. FOCB was actively involved in the software releases that did occur in 2005.

The Michigan Child Support Program Leadership Group makes major decisions regarding MiCSES. FOCB has two representatives on the Program Leadership Group, and the FOCB Director rotates as its Chair. FOCB also occupied leadership positions on various work improvement teams, which provide suggestions to the Program Leadership Group for MiCSES improvements. However, without a larger appropriation for FY 2006, the program would be unable to pay for these necessary improvements of the system. To overcome this obstacle, FOCB helped to identify potential sources of additional revenue and worked with the child support partnership to obtain a $17.8 million increase in the MiCSES budget for FY 2006. This money will support a two-year project to improve MiCSES. FOCB also helped set priorities for the system "fixes" that must be undertaken in the next two years. By continued participation in the planning and design of the system, FOCB will help the child support program achieve many of the long-awaited improvements to MiCSES. However, the success of the two-year project will depend, in part, on whether federal and state governments impose new functional requirements on the system.

PRISONER SUPPORT ADJUSTMENT PROJECT

Most incarcerated parents are unable to pay child support. In addition, being confined makes it difficult for these parents to obtain court orders modifying their support obligations. As a result, many prisoners accumulate significant child support arrearages. Confronted with arrearages that they cannot pay, many prisoners simply give up trying to pay child support—and abandon their children.

In late 2004, with a $100,000 grant from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, FOCB launched the Prisoner Support Adjustment Project. Pilot projects include the family divisions of Ingham, Kent, Saginaw and Wayne County Circuit Courts. In 2005, the pilot courts tried various methods of assisting prisoners with filing motions and making court appearances by telephone or video. In addition, students from the Michigan State University and Wayne State University law schools provided pro bono representation for some prisoners. In 2005, FOCB, in cooperation with the Department of Corrections (DOC), developed recommended procedures for prisoner-payers whose cases qualified for the project.

Through this project, support orders for hundreds of incarcerated parents were modified to reflect their ability to pay. Building on this experience, FOCB will continue to work with DOC and Michigan's family courts to improve imprisoned parents' access to courts, so that judges can set realistic support amounts.

MEDIATION

The Supreme Court recognizes that domestic relations litigation can cause families to suffer extreme emotional trauma. In 2005, under the direction of Justice Maura Corrigan, the Supreme Court continued to pursue projects that help families resolve conflict through means other than litigation.

The Postjudgment Parenting Time Pilot Project, which was initiated by SCAO's Office of Dispute Resolution in 2004, became very successful in 2005. This pilot project helps parents resolve their conflicts and encourages cooperative parenting. In 2005, two more counties were added to the original five counties that began the pilot project. In addition, the project's mediation services were expanded to include custody issues as well as parenting time. In 2005, the pilot counties mediated 227 domestic relations cases and had a settlement rate of 54.7 percent.

OTHER FOCB ACTIVITIES

- CUSTOMER SERVICE UNIT: In 2005, FOCB established a Customer Service Unit staffed by outstanding law students from Lansing area law schools. These customer service clerks assist FOCB by responding to telephone calls from litigants, government officials, and county Friend of the Court offices. The clerks also assist with correspondence, data collection, grievance audits, and research. Moreover, the students have demonstrated an interest in family law as a career.

- LEGISLATIVE TRAINING: In 2005, FOCB provided training sessions for Michigan legislators and their aides. The attendees learned about FOC office operations, the FOC grievance procedure, and how best to deal with their constituents' complaints about FOC matters.
- SPECIAL FEDERAL GRANTS: In 2005, SCAO/Office of Dispute Resolution administered the federal "Access and Visitation" grant that provided federal funding for state programs to improve noncustodial parents' access to their children. Twenty-one Michigan FOC offices shared a total of $205,792 in Access and Visitation grant funding. As a result of this grant, 857 individuals received services from county Access and Visitation programs. Many of the counties used the grant funding to combine a supervised parenting-time program with family counseling and/or parent education programs.

COURT TECHNOLOGY*JUDICIAL NETWORK PROJECT

In 2005, law enforcement got a boost from the Judicial Network Project, which allows Michigan trial courts to report felony dispositions electronically to a state law enforcement database. Thanks to this project, which was completed in April 2005, 96 percent of adult felony and 95 percent of juvenile felony dispositions were reported electronically from the courts to the Michigan State Police and Secretary of State. Electronic reporting allows courts to update criminal history information daily and often immediately, with resulting benefits to law enforcement. In the past, because many courts lacked the necessary technology, Michigan State Police staff had to enter criminal history information manually, a process which could take a week or more.

The annual budget for the four-year project averaged $2.3 million. Funding came from National Criminal History Improvement Program grants and the Judicial Technology Improvement Fund (JTIF), an annual funding source in the Supreme Court's budget supported by court fees. SCAO's Judicial Information Systems Division (JIS) led the project, assisted by the Michigan State Police, the Michigan Department of Information Technology, SCAO's Trial Court Services Division, county and municipal governments, and private contractors.

HIGHLIGHTS

The State Police have an October 2006 deadline for trial courts to submit misdemeanor dispositions electronically. Accordingly, since April 2005, the project has focused on automating courts for electronic submission of misdemeanor dispositions.

JTIF will be used primarily to fund the ongoing support of the network. The fund will also expand into other applications for data warehousing, payment of traffic tickets, electronic filing of court documents over the Internet, and a new court case management system.

JUDICIAL DATA WAREHOUSE

In 2005, SCAO continued the implementation of the Judicial Data Warehouse, which will allow the judiciary to collect information about pending and closed cases throughout Michigan.

The state's 251 trial court locations use 41 different case management systems distributed on 150 different hardware platforms. As a result, courts have difficulty sharing case information with each other and with other branches of government. This inability to communicate creates an information void about defendants in criminal cases and others involved in the Michigan justice system.

Starting in 2002, SCAO began using JTIF money to add judicial information to the state's data warehouse. The data warehouse will give state trial judges and staff access to a statewide name index with associated detail data to identify pending and closed cases in other courts. SCAO will be able to generate statistical and trend information.

In 2005, data from the warehouse was integrated with the State Police I-Services Gateway application, a pilot project funded by a Homeland Security Grant. Also interested in data sharing projects are the Department of Natural Resources, the State Police's Office of Highway Safety Planning, and the Department of Corrections.

The map on page 9 illustrates the 89 courts in 34 counties participating in the warehouse project as of 2005.

ELECTRONIC TICKET PAYMENT

In 2005, the 38th District Court in Eastpointe was added to a JTIF pilot project that allows users to pay traffic tickets online. The 62A District Court in Wyoming was the first pilot site for the e-ticket project and has been in operation since February 2004. By going to <https://e.courts.michigan.gov>, which is part of the Michigan.gov website, users can:

- post payments to a court's case management system;
- use the state's secure credit card processing application; and
- pay multiple tickets to different courts with one credit card transaction.

Application development focused on security issues and the various operational environments of local trial court systems. These changes are slated for completion at the end of the first quarter of 2006. The project will then expand to include other courts.

ELECTRONIC FILING

Lawyers and lay people will be able to file court documents from their computers under another judicial branch technology project, known as e-Filing. In 2005, six courts in Michigan offered e-Filing on a limited basis for selective case types.

In Ottawa Circuit, attorneys subscribe to an e-Filing service. Documents submitted to the service are printed by the court clerk and then manually processed.

Only attorney subscribers and designated court staff have access to the electronic file. In Wayne County, a private vendor provides electronic service of pleadings for the court's asbestos docket. This electronic service has eliminated paper copies of court documents and improved service for all asbestos docket participants.

To make it possible for all state courts to offer e-Filing, in 2004 the Supreme Court began work on an Enterprise e-Filing Manager (EFM). The EFM will interface with executive branch agencies and vendors that already provide electronic service of pleadings. In addition to importing data from those sources, the EFM will interact and exchange information with all state courts' case and docket management systems. In June 2005, the Michigan Court of Appeals implemented e-Filing for Michigan Public Service Commission cases. In addition, in the last quarter of 2005, the Eaton and Oakland County Circuit Courts implemented e-Filing for a select group of civil cases.

JIS will continue to evaluate these pilot projects in 2006 to determine whether and how to expand e-Filing.

STATE-WIDE TRIAL COURT CASE MANAGEMENT SYSTEM

The backbone of every Michigan trial court is its case management system. In the past, each trial court selected a system that best met the court's needs within the court's financial limits. As a result, trial courts are supported by many different case management systems, which are deployed on different and decentralized servers. Recently, however, many courts are seeking alternatives to their existing case management systems, spurred by a number of factors: The need to upgrade applications, an increase in mandated electronic reporting requirements, costly conversion failures, cutbacks in local funding, and vendors' termination of support services.

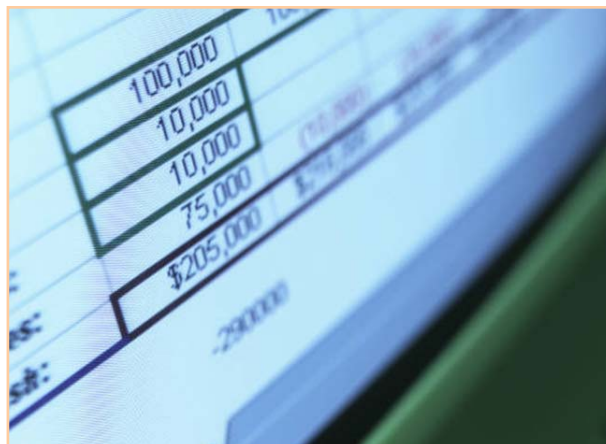

In 2005, the judiciary began investigating alternatives that would provide a case management system similar to other applications found on the user's desktop. JIS and Trial Court Services are leading this effort.

COLLECTIONS

Collecting court-ordered financial sanctions is a top priority for the Michigan judiciary. Enforcing court orders, including financial sanctions, enhances courts' integrity and credibility. In addition, the judiciary is responsible by statute for collecting court fines, fees, and costs. These funds support law enforcement, libraries, the Crime Victims Rights Fund, and local governments. To improve collections, SCAO convened a Collections Advisory Committee in 2004. The Supreme Court approved the committee's recommended collections strategy on June 5, 2005. When this three-phase strategy is complete—in approximately June 2009—all state trial courts will have a SCAO-mandated collections program. Features include training, data collection, and best practices.

In 2005, SCAO took additional steps to improve court collections:

- On-site collections reviews. SCAO and the reviewed courts will use the data to assess the courts' success with collections.
- Improved audit procedures to identify courts for on-site technical assistance.
- New reporting requirements for the courts and case management system providers. Starting on July 15, 2006, courts will provide annual standard receivables and collections reports, which will help SCAO monitor court collections.
- Software enhancements and related training. The software generates mailings to defendants with outstanding balances.
- Prisoner account collections. SCAO matched circuit court cases with non-restitution balances to a Department of Corrections prisoner file. As a result, circuit courts in 29 counties issued orders to remit prisoner funds.
- Legislation that enhances courts' ability to enforce payment. The legislation, which SCAO supported, also gives courts authority to collect funds from prisoner accounts.
- Development of a simplified process for collecting outstanding fines and costs through the Michigan Department of Treasury, including intercepting state tax refunds.
- Use of the State Data Warehouse to enhance collections.

THERAPEUTIC JUSTICE: PROBLEM-SOLVING COURTS

DRUG TREATMENT COURTS

Criminal offenders who are addicted to alcohol or drugs frequently cycle in and out of the justice system. Drug treatment courts seek to break that cycle by treating the offender's addiction. This approach, often described as "therapeutic jurisprudence," focuses on treatment.

Michigan had 56 operational drug treatment courts with an additional seven courts in planning stages in 2005. Both operational courts and those in planning are eligible for federal and state grant funding. Federal funding for these courts is available through the Edward Byrne Memorial Justice Assistance Grant (JAG) program (formerly known as the Edward Byrne Memorial Formula Grant). JAG funds are administered by the Office of Drug Control Policy.

State funding is administered by SCAO through the Michigan Drug Court Grant Program (MDCGP). In fiscal year 2005, $2 million was appropriated to the MDCGP, which funded 42 drug treatment courts. Michigan drug courts are comprised of programs for adults, juveniles, families, and drivers arrested for operating a vehicle under the influence of drugs or alcohol. Drug treatment courts that receive federal or state funding must comply with standards set by the National Association of Drug Court Professionals.

In 2005, SCAO continued to collaborate with the Office of Drug Control Policy and the Department of Corrections in funding drug treatment courts that target prison-bound, nonviolent felony offenders and probation violators. By focusing on this population, selected drug courts help reduce prison overcrowding and address the cycle of addiction and criminal activity in this priority population.

DRUG TREATMENT COURT LEGISLATION

On January 1, 2005, 2004 PA 224 went into effect; the legislation governs Michigan drug treatment court criteria and operations. In addition to other features, the legislation:

- Defines a "drug treatment court" as a court-supervised treatment program for offenders who abuse or are dependent upon any controlled substance or alcohol.
- Establishes essential characteristics for drug treatment courts, including integration of alcohol treatment or other drug treatment services with justice system case processing.

- Sets conditions for participants—for example, a “violent offender” is not eligible.
- Provides for screening of potential participants, including a complete review of the offender’s criminal and substance use/abuse history, dependency on drugs or alcohol, and danger to the community.
- Provides that a participant’s statements or other information obtained through drug treatment court participation are confidential.
- Sets requirements for services that drug treatment courts must provide to participants.

DRUG COURT CASE MANAGEMENT INFORMATION SYSTEM (DCCMIS)

2004 PA 224 also called for SCAO to gauge the effectiveness of Michigan’s drug treatment courts. Accordingly, in 2005, SCAO entered into a contract to develop an automated case management information system, known as the Drug Court Case Management Information System (DCCMIS). Using DCCMIS, drug courts will manage their caseloads, as well as provide individual data on each drug court applicant and participant as required by the legislation. In addition, the application will help courts and SCAO evaluate drug courts’ effectiveness. Drug treatment courts who receive MDCGP funding will be required to use DCCMIS; in addition, DCCMIS will be available to all drug treatment courts, regardless of whether they receive state funding. The system will be maintained by SCAO, and there will be no local cost to use the application. DCCMIS will be implemented statewide, beginning early in 2006.

FAMILY DEPENDENCY DRUG TREATMENT COURTS

Parental substance abuse has long been acknowledged as either the primary reason or a significant contributing factor in many child welfare cases. Family dependency courts, a fairly new concept, help protect children in neglect and abuse cases by coordinating the efforts of child welfare services, the court system, and community treatment providers. These agencies help provide substance abuse assistance and other services for parents. In 2005, Michigan had two operational family drug treatment courts and another three in the planning stage.

SOBRIETY COURTS

Sobriety courts, also known as DWI courts, work with offenders who have been charged with driving while under the influence of drugs or alcohol. DWI courts make up approximately 25 percent of the total number of drug treatment courts in the state of Michigan. In 2005, SCAO continued a joint effort with the Office of Highway Safety Planning to evaluate whether DWI courts are effective in reducing repeat alcohol-related driving offenses.

COURT SECURITY

Since March 11, 2005, when a defendant grabbed a gun from a sheriff's deputy and went on a shooting rampage in an Atlanta courthouse, court officials throughout the country have focused on improving security. On June 20, 2005, the Michigan Supreme Court hired the first Trial Court Security Specialist to help trial courts address their security concerns. The specialist's responsibilities include developing security protocols for Michigan trial courts and advising judges and court staff on security issues. The position also includes applying for grant applications for federal and state funds for security programs.

In 2005, trial court security achievements included creating an e-mail Listserv (CT-SECURITY-L) for trial court security and emergency services coordinators. Other accomplishments included training about security issues for judges' families, as well as a survey of court security and emergency management. In 2006, security initiatives will include developing a Continuity of Operations Plan (COOP) for the Michigan Hall of Justice that will include a plan template for use by trial courts. Also planned for 2006: a secure trial court security website using the Michigan Court Applications Portal; revision of the Michigan Court Security Manual; and the development of other security tools and aids for trial courts.

2005 WEB PRESENCE*“ONE COURT OF JUSTICE” WEBSITE

In November 2005, the redesigned “Michigan Courts” website debuted. The site, which links to websites for the Michigan Supreme Court, Michigan Court of Appeals, State Court Administrative Office, and many state courts, was reorganized to make information more accessible to the public. The redesigned site contains the categories “Court and Public Resources,” “Legal Community” and “Press and Media,” with a number of features under each category. “Press and Media,” for example, includes links to Supreme Court press releases and compilations of legal news items. “Court and Public Resources” lists many features, including links to Michigan laws and court statistics. Educational resources featured on the website include the Supreme Court Learning Center, which offers special programs for children studying the justice system.

The site retains direct links to sites for the Michigan Supreme Court, Michigan Court of Appeals, State Court Administrative Office, a legal self-help center, and others. The site also offers a Google search engine.

A wide variety of materials are available via the “One Court of Justice” website at no charge, including Supreme Court and Court of Appeals opinions, court forms, Michigan Court Rules, and ethics rules for attorneys and judges. In 2005, the website received an average of 7,732 visits per day. A total of 1,300,862 users visited the website 58,869,987 times in 2005.

SUPREME COURT ORDERS AVAILABLE VIA E-MAIL

In October 2005, the Supreme Court introduced a new service: free e-mail delivery of Supreme Court orders.

Most appeals come to the Supreme Court on applications for leave to appeal, meaning that the Supreme Court must decide whether to take the case. The Court’s response to these applications has significance for the parties and can also have implications for Michigan law. For example, if the Supreme Court denies leave to appeal from a published decision of the Michigan Court of Appeals, the statements of law in that Court of Appeals decision will not be altered on a direct appeal to the Supreme Court.

The e-mail service is a joint effort by the Supreme Court Clerk’s Office and information technology staff from the Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals. The Court’s orders are sent by e-mail every morning at 9:30 a.m.

Supreme Court and Court of Appeals opinions are also available via a free e-mail service, which was offered for the first time in 2003.

MICHIGAN SUPREME COURT LEARNING CENTER

The Michigan Supreme Court Learning Center, located on the first floor of the Michigan Hall of Justice, welcomed 11,579 visitors in 2005. Hands-on exhibits and special programs educate visitors about basic principles of law and Michigan's judicial branch, including the judiciary's history. Visitors included students from fourth grade through high school, college and law students, community organizations, and the general public. Most visitors are Michigan residents, but the Learning Center also welcomed travelers from across the United States, Europe, and Asia. Trained volunteers guide tours and assist with special projects.

On May 3, the Learning Center celebrated Law Day 2005, following the national theme of "We the People in Action: The American Jury." Visitors learned about the importance of the jury through special tours and the opportunity to meet with Supreme Court justices, judges of the Court of Appeals and the 30th Circuit Court, lawyers, and a circuit court jury clerk.

WWW.KNOWTHECONSEQUENCES.NET/

In June, the computer interactive entitled "Drinking & Driving: Know the Consequences" became available online through the Learning Center's "educational resources" page, <http://courts.michigan.gov/plc/resources.htm>. The interactive, aimed primarily at middle school and high school students, illustrates the consequences of drinking and driving. This project was made possible through funding from the Office of Highway Safety Planning.

In July, a group of 7th, 8th, and 9th grade students attended "Exploring Careers in the Law," a week-long program at the Hall of Justice. The students explored a variety of careers in the court system while meeting with justices, judges, lawyers, law professors, and court staff. A visit to a Lansing district court was also included.

In August, K–12 teachers came to the Hall of Justice for a seminar on how to incorporate the Learning Center into classroom curricula. Seminar presenters included representatives from the Department of Education, the Hall of Justice, the Office of Highway Safety Planning, the State Bar of Michigan, and 54-A District Court in Lansing.

The Learning Center also completed "Oral Arguments in the Michigan Supreme Court," a video aimed at middle school and high school audiences. The video, and a companion discussion guide, were produced in cooperation with the Michigan Supreme Court Clerk and the Public Information Office. The resource examines the role of oral arguments in the Michigan Supreme Court's appellate process.

MICHIGAN JUDICIAL INSTITUTE

The Michigan Judicial Institute (MJJ) is the educational office of the State Court Administrative Office, dedicated to providing quality, timely education for Michigan judges and judicial branch staff. In 2005, MJJ held over 40 seminars focusing on substantive, procedural, and practical issues. Several of those seminars involved collaboration with outside agencies, such as “Safe Havens” trainings for family division judges and judicial staff, held with the National Council of Juvenile and Family Court Judges and the Michigan Domestic Violence Prevention and Treatment Board. MJJ also collaborated with judicial and professional associations to provide educational sessions during the associations’ annual conferences. MJJ continued to provide court support staff with on-site training opportunities to minimize staff time away from work.

In 2005, the State Justice Institute, the Center for Effective Public Policy, and the National Council of Juvenile and Family Court Judges selected Michigan as one of three states in which to test a judicial education curriculum on juvenile sex offense cases. The seminar and webcast will be held on February 23, 2006.

MJJ continued to offer educational opportunities via internet webcast. Court staff throughout Michigan may view educational seminars by connecting to <http://www.courts.mi.gov/mji>. Webcasts can be viewed as the seminar takes place or later in an archived format. MJJ held 16 seminars that were simultaneously webcast, during which 279 participants “attended” those seminars via the internet. In 2005, 2,152 people viewed MJJ’s archived webcasts.

Also in 2005, MJJ’s Publications Team produced a new publication, Criminal Procedure Monograph 8: Felony Sentencing, and new editions of three existing titles: the Contempt of Court Benchbook, the Crime Victim Rights Manual, and the Traffic Benchbook. MJJ and the Institute for Continuing Legal Education agreed to provide free copies of ICLE’s Michigan Probate Benchbook and Michigan Family Law Benchbook, and free access to biweekly updates to these publications, to Michigan probate and family court judges and family court referees. The Institute for Continuing Legal Education will bear all costs of this joint endeavor; no state funds will be used to provide these publications to the judges and referees.

MJJ webcasts and publications, including monthly publication updates, are available at <http://courts.mi.gov/mji>.

ALTERNATIVE DISPUTE RESOLUTION/COMMUNITY DISPUTE RESOLUTION

In the past, litigation was the traditional forum for resolving legal disputes. But increasingly, courts and litigants alike are recognizing that there are many costs associated with this adversarial approach. Litigation can be time-consuming and expensive; in addition, it can destroy the underlying relationships between the parties, especially in domestic disputes.

Alternative dispute resolution, known as ADR, offers a quicker and less adversarial way to resolve legal disputes. Mediation, the most commonly used ADR procedure in Michigan, involves a trained neutral party who helps the parties to a dispute reach their own resolution. Matters ranging from small claims cases to domestic relations to complex civil cases are resolved through mediation. Mediation is also used with juvenile truancy cases, child welfare cases, and contested adult guardianship matters.

With the rise of ADR, mediation is being used in an increasing number of legal arenas. In 2005, SCAO began using mediation in postjudgment parenting time disputes referred by the Friend of the Court. SCAO will evaluate this pilot project in late 2006.

In addition, a growing number of courts are encouraging—and in some cases ordering—parties to enter into mediation. Eighty-three Michigan courts have a formal procedure for referring cases to ADR. A list of SCAO-approved court ADR plans is available on the “One Court of Justice” website at <http://courts.michigan.gov/scao/resources/other/localadrlist3.pdf>.

SCAO also provides funding to Michigan’s 20 Community Dispute Resolution Program (CDRP) centers. In some jurisdictions, CDRP centers mediate small claims and landlord tenant cases; in others, parties in contested adult guardianship matters resolve their disputes informally. In addition, Michigan courts are increasingly using CDRP centers to help resolve complex cases, including contested probate actions, and general civil cases in both district and circuit courts.

In 2005, CDRP centers achieved a resolution rate of 73 percent when all parties agreed to use a center’s services. Of the 14,116 cases disposed of by centers in 2005, 79 percent were referred by courts.

MICHIGAN SUPREME COURT

The Supreme Court is Michigan's court of last resort, consisting of seven justices. Cases come before the Court during a term that starts August 1 and runs through July 31 of the following year. The Court hears oral arguments in Lansing beginning in October of each term. Decisions are released throughout the term.

Michigan Supreme Court justices are elected for eight-year terms. Candidates are nominated by political parties and are elected on a nonpartisan ballot. Two justices are elected every two years (one in the eighth year) in the November election. Supreme Court candidates must be qualified electors, licensed to practice law in Michigan for at least five years, and under 70 years of age at the time of election. The justices' salaries are fixed by the State Officers Compensation Commission and paid by the state of Michigan. Vacancies are filled by appointment of the Governor until the next general election. Every two years, the justices elect a member of the Court as Chief Justice.

Each year, the Michigan Supreme Court receives over 2,000 new case filings. In most cases, the litigants seek review of Michigan Court of Appeals decisions, but the Court also hears cases involving charges of professional misconduct by attorneys and judges and a small number of matters as to which it has original jurisdiction. All cases are reviewed and considered by the entire Court. The justices are assisted by the Supreme Court Commissioners, the Court's permanent research staff. The Court issues a decision by order or opinion in all cases filed. The Court may affirm or reverse the decision below, or remand the case to a lower court for further proceedings.

In 2005, 2,437 cases were filed with the Michigan Supreme Court; the Court disposed of 2,564 cases. Of the 2,437 new filings, 854 (35 percent) were civil cases and 1,583 (65 percent) were criminal cases. As of December 31, 2005, the total number of cases pending was 946.

COURT OF APPEALS

The Court of Appeals is the intermediate appellate court between the trial courts and the Michigan Supreme Court. While the Court of Appeals was created by the 1963 Michigan Constitution, its jurisdiction is established by statute. The practices and procedures of the Court of Appeals are governed by Michigan Court Rules set by the Supreme Court. Court of Appeals judges' salaries are set by the Legislature. The Supreme Court chooses a chief judge for the Court of Appeals every two years.

Court of Appeals judges are elected for six-year terms in nonpartisan elections. A candidate for the Court of Appeals must be a lawyer admitted to practice for at least five years, under 70 years of age at the time of election, a qualified elector, and a resident of the district in which the candidate is running.

Judges are elected from four districts, which are drawn by the Legislature along county lines. The districts are as nearly as possible of equal population. The Legislature may change the number of judges and alter the districts in which they are elected by changing state law.

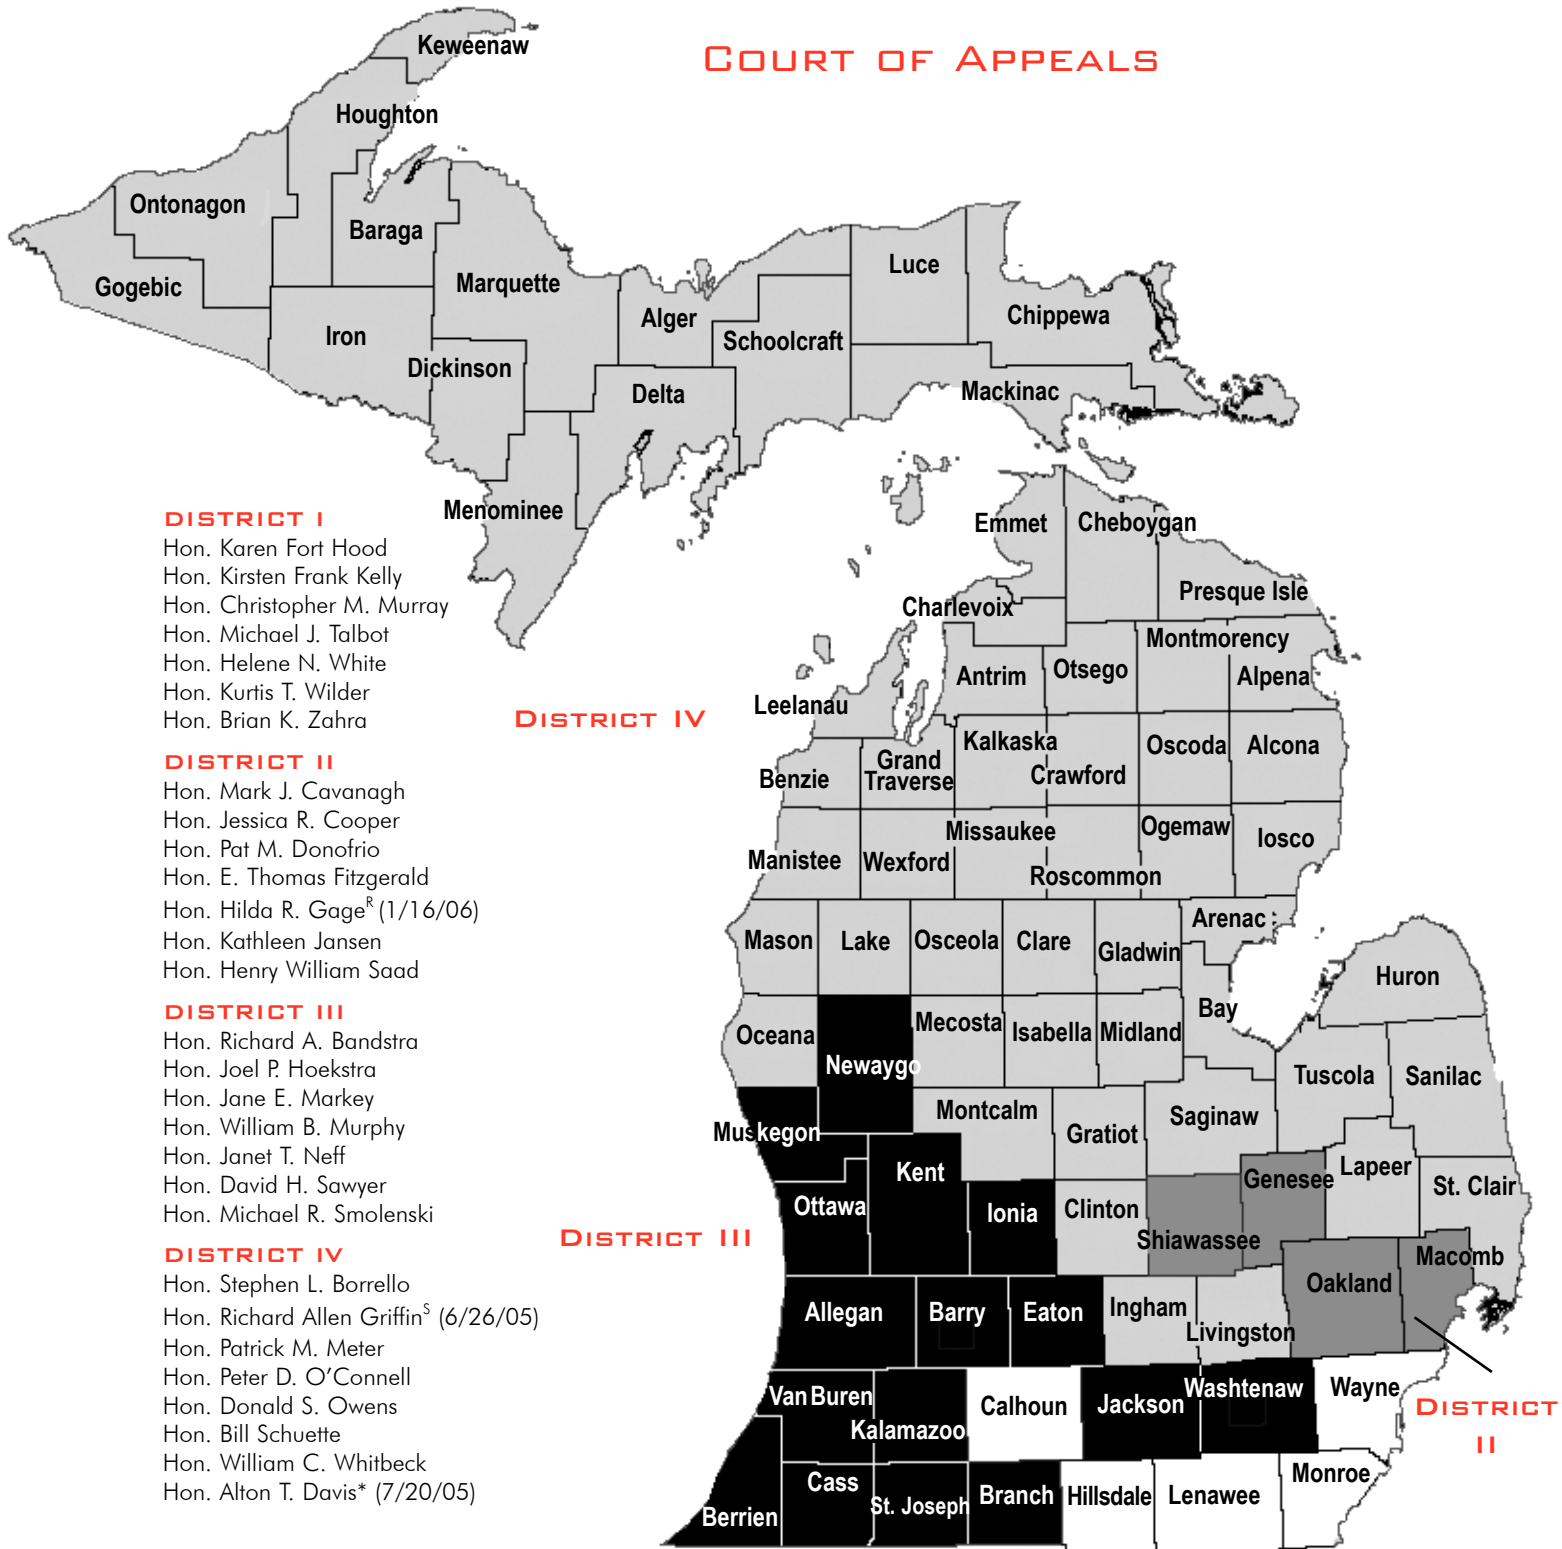

Panels of three Court of Appeals judges hear cases in Lansing, Detroit, Grand Rapids, and Marquette. Panels are rotated geographically so that the judges hear cases in each of the Court's locations.

The Court of Appeals hears both civil and criminal cases. Persons convicted of a criminal offense other than by a guilty plea have an appeal by right under the state constitution.

In 2005, 7,629 cases were filed with the Court of Appeals. This represents an increase of slightly more than 8 percent (574 cases) over the 7,055 cases filed in 2004.

In 2005, the Court of Appeals disposed of 7,853 cases, an increase of nearly 8 percent (560 cases) over the 7,293 cases disposed of in 2004. Of the dispositions, 4,444 (56.6 percent) were by order and 3,409 (43.4 percent) were by opinion.

CIRCUIT COURT

The circuit court is the trial court of general jurisdiction in Michigan because of its very broad powers. The circuit court has jurisdiction over all actions except those given by state law to another court. The circuit court's original jurisdiction includes criminal cases where the offense involves a felony or certain serious misdemeanors, civil cases over $25,000, family division cases, and appeals from other courts and administrative agencies.

In addition, the circuit court has superintending control over courts within the judicial circuit, subject to final superintending control of the Supreme Court.

The state is divided into judicial circuits along county lines. The number of judges within a circuit is established by the Legislature to accommodate required judicial activity. In multi-county circuits, judges travel from one county to another to hold court sessions.

Circuit judges are elected to six-year terms in nonpartisan elections. A candidate must be a qualified elector, a resident of the judicial circuit, a lawyer admitted to practice for five years and under 70 years of age at the time of election. The Legislature sets salaries for circuit judges.

CASELOAD TRENDS ANALYSIS

In 2002, the State Court Administrative Office (SCAO) revised the way Michigan trial courts report their caseloads. This change may affect trend analysis that includes data from previous reporting years.

Before 2002, circuit court caseloads were reported under a number of broad categories: appeals, civil, criminal, domestic relations, personal protection, juvenile, and other family division cases. Caseload reporting included a few distinctions in types of proceedings within those categories. By contrast, beginning in 2002, caseloads are now reported by individual case type. These individual case types are combined so that data reported after 2001 may be compared against categories from previous years. The Circuit Court Statistical Supplements for each year, beginning in 2002, provide additional detailed information. These supplements contain both a summary report and a detail report of the caseload for each circuit court. The summary report presents caseload in the broad categories published in previous years' reports, while the detail report presents the caseload data by each case type code.

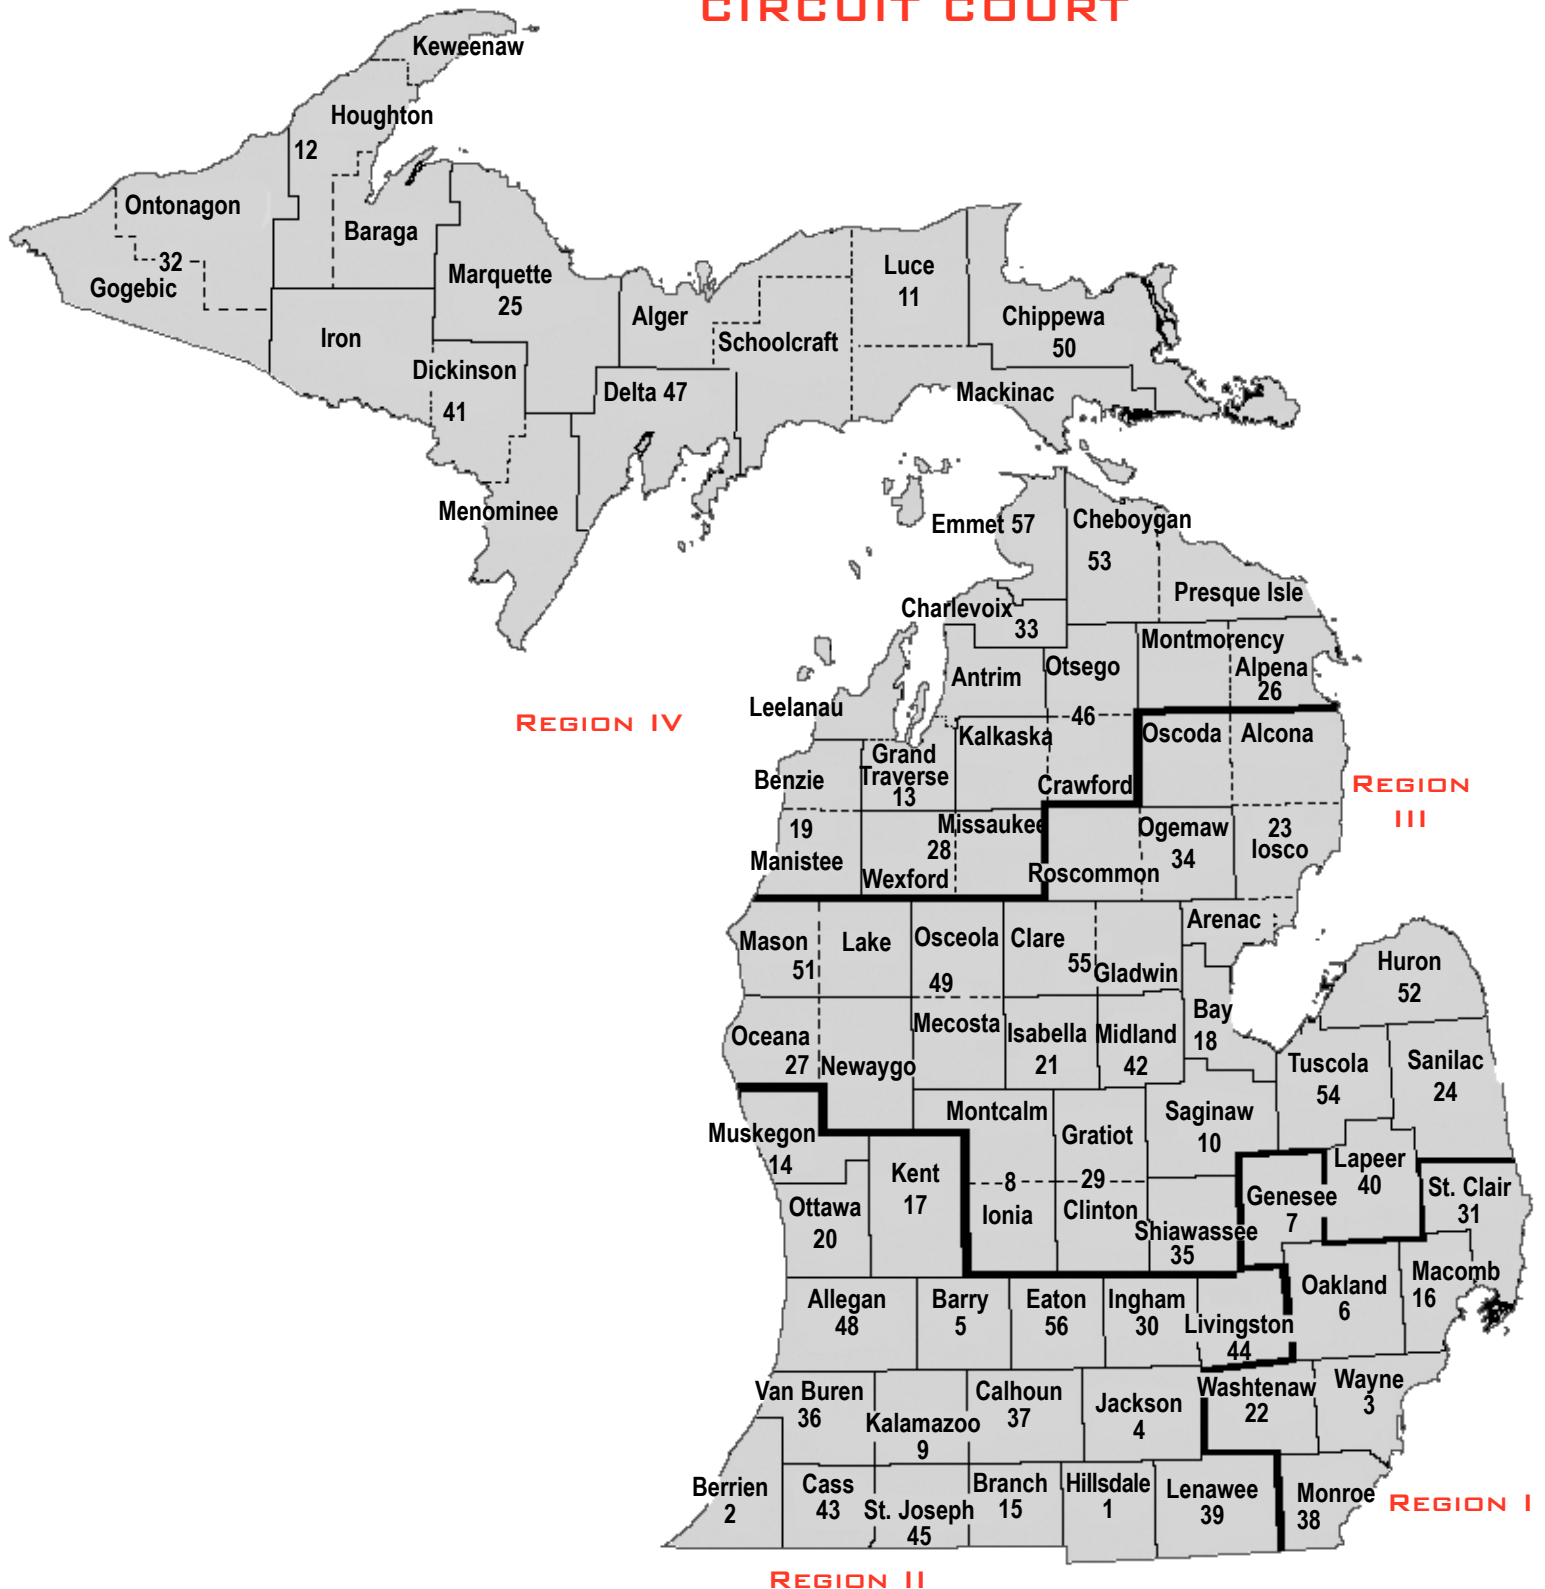

Before 2002, case dispositions were reported when final judgments were filed with the clerk of the court. Beginning in 2002, case dispositions are now reported when cases are adjudicated by a judicial officer, which occurs before a final judgment is rendered. Case dispositions also now include cases that become inactive due to circumstances outside the court's control, such as a criminal defendant's failure to appear in court or bankruptcy proceedings that stay a civil case. Such cases do not reappear in caseload statistics until designated events occur. At that point, the case is counted reopened. The current time guidelines criteria are from case initiation to case adjudication. As a result, caseload reports provide a more precise pending caseload and accurate measures of how long cases are before the court and how long it takes to resolve them. To compare total dispositions reported after 2001 to numbers reported in previous years, one must subtract cases disposed of as inactive.

Reporting in child protective proceedings also changed in 2002. Before 2002, filings were based on the number of children, regardless of whether a single petition involved more than one child. Starting in 2002, courts report both the number of petitions filed and the number of children associated with those filings. Accordingly, it appears that there were significantly more filings for 2001 and earlier years than for 2002 and following years. As a result, it is more difficult to make comparisons between new filings of child protective proceedings reported after 2001 and those reported for prior years. It is possible, however, to arrive at some conclusions about overall trends by analyzing the number of filings, the number of children associated with those filings, and the number of supplemental petitions for termination proceedings. To help assess the overall juvenile delinquency and child protective proceedings caseload, the number of minors in the system may be compared from one year to the next. For other case-related information regarding child protective and adoption proceedings, see the Circuit Court Statistical Supplements.

Starting in 2002, circuit courts began reporting the number of personal protection orders actually issued against adults and minors, as well as the number of personal protection orders that are rescinded each year.

General civil filings decreased by a nominal amount between 2004 and 2005. Fewer auto negligence, non-auto damage, and other civil cases were filed in 2005 than in any year between 1999 and 2005. Overall, fewer civil cases were filed in 2005 than in any year between 1999 and 2005.

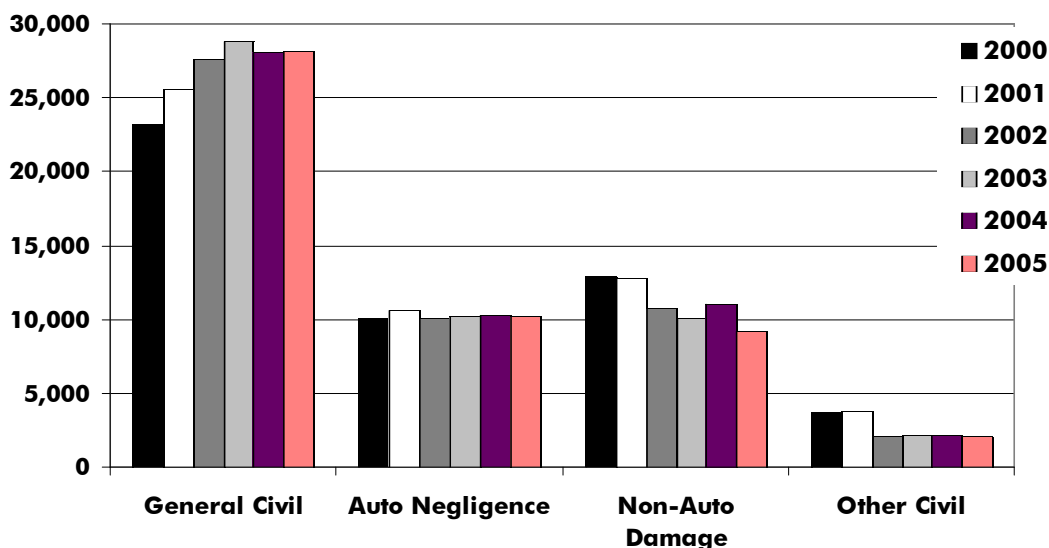

The number of civil cases disposed of or made inactive exceeded the number of civil cases filed or reopened. The statewide clearance rate for civil cases was 106.4 percent.

Over 42 percent of civil cases were disposed by default, consent judgment, settlement, or summary disposition. Almost 40 percent of civil cases were dismissed by the plaintiff. Before 2002, the child protective category reflected the number of children associated with these cases. Beginning in 2002, the courts were instructed to report the number of cases in this category and to report the number of children in another data field. Beginning in 2002, cases removed as inactive were excluded from the dispositions.

In 2005, there were 153 juvenile offense filings in which the minor was to be tried as an adult, fewer than in any other year since 2000. Juvenile delinquency filings also peaked in 2000 and have continued to decrease.

Juvenile traffic filings increased from 2004, when both juvenile traffic and misdemeanor traffic cases in district court were at a low level.

At the close of 2005, 16,789 juveniles were under court jurisdiction as a result of delinquency proceedings. Of those, 12,986 were supervised by the circuit court, 2,632 were supervised by the Department of Community Justice of Wayne County, and 1,171 were supervised by the Department of Human Services. An additional 7,556 juveniles not already under court supervision were awaiting adjudication.

Of the 2,692 petitions filed requesting termination of parental rights, 1,224 were filed as part of original or amended petitions, and 1,468 were filed as supplemental petitions. There were an additional 674 supplemental petitions related to child protective cases; these petitions were filed for reasons other than termination.

COURT OF CLAIMS CASE FILINGS AND DISPOSITIONS

PROBATE COURT

Each Michigan county has a probate court, with the exception of 10 counties that have consolidated to form five probate court districts (see map on page 44). Each probate court district has one judge, and each of the remaining counties have one or more judges depending on the county's weighted caseload.

The probate court has jurisdiction over admission of wills, administration of estates and trusts, guardianships, conservatorships, and the treatment of mentally ill and developmentally disabled persons.

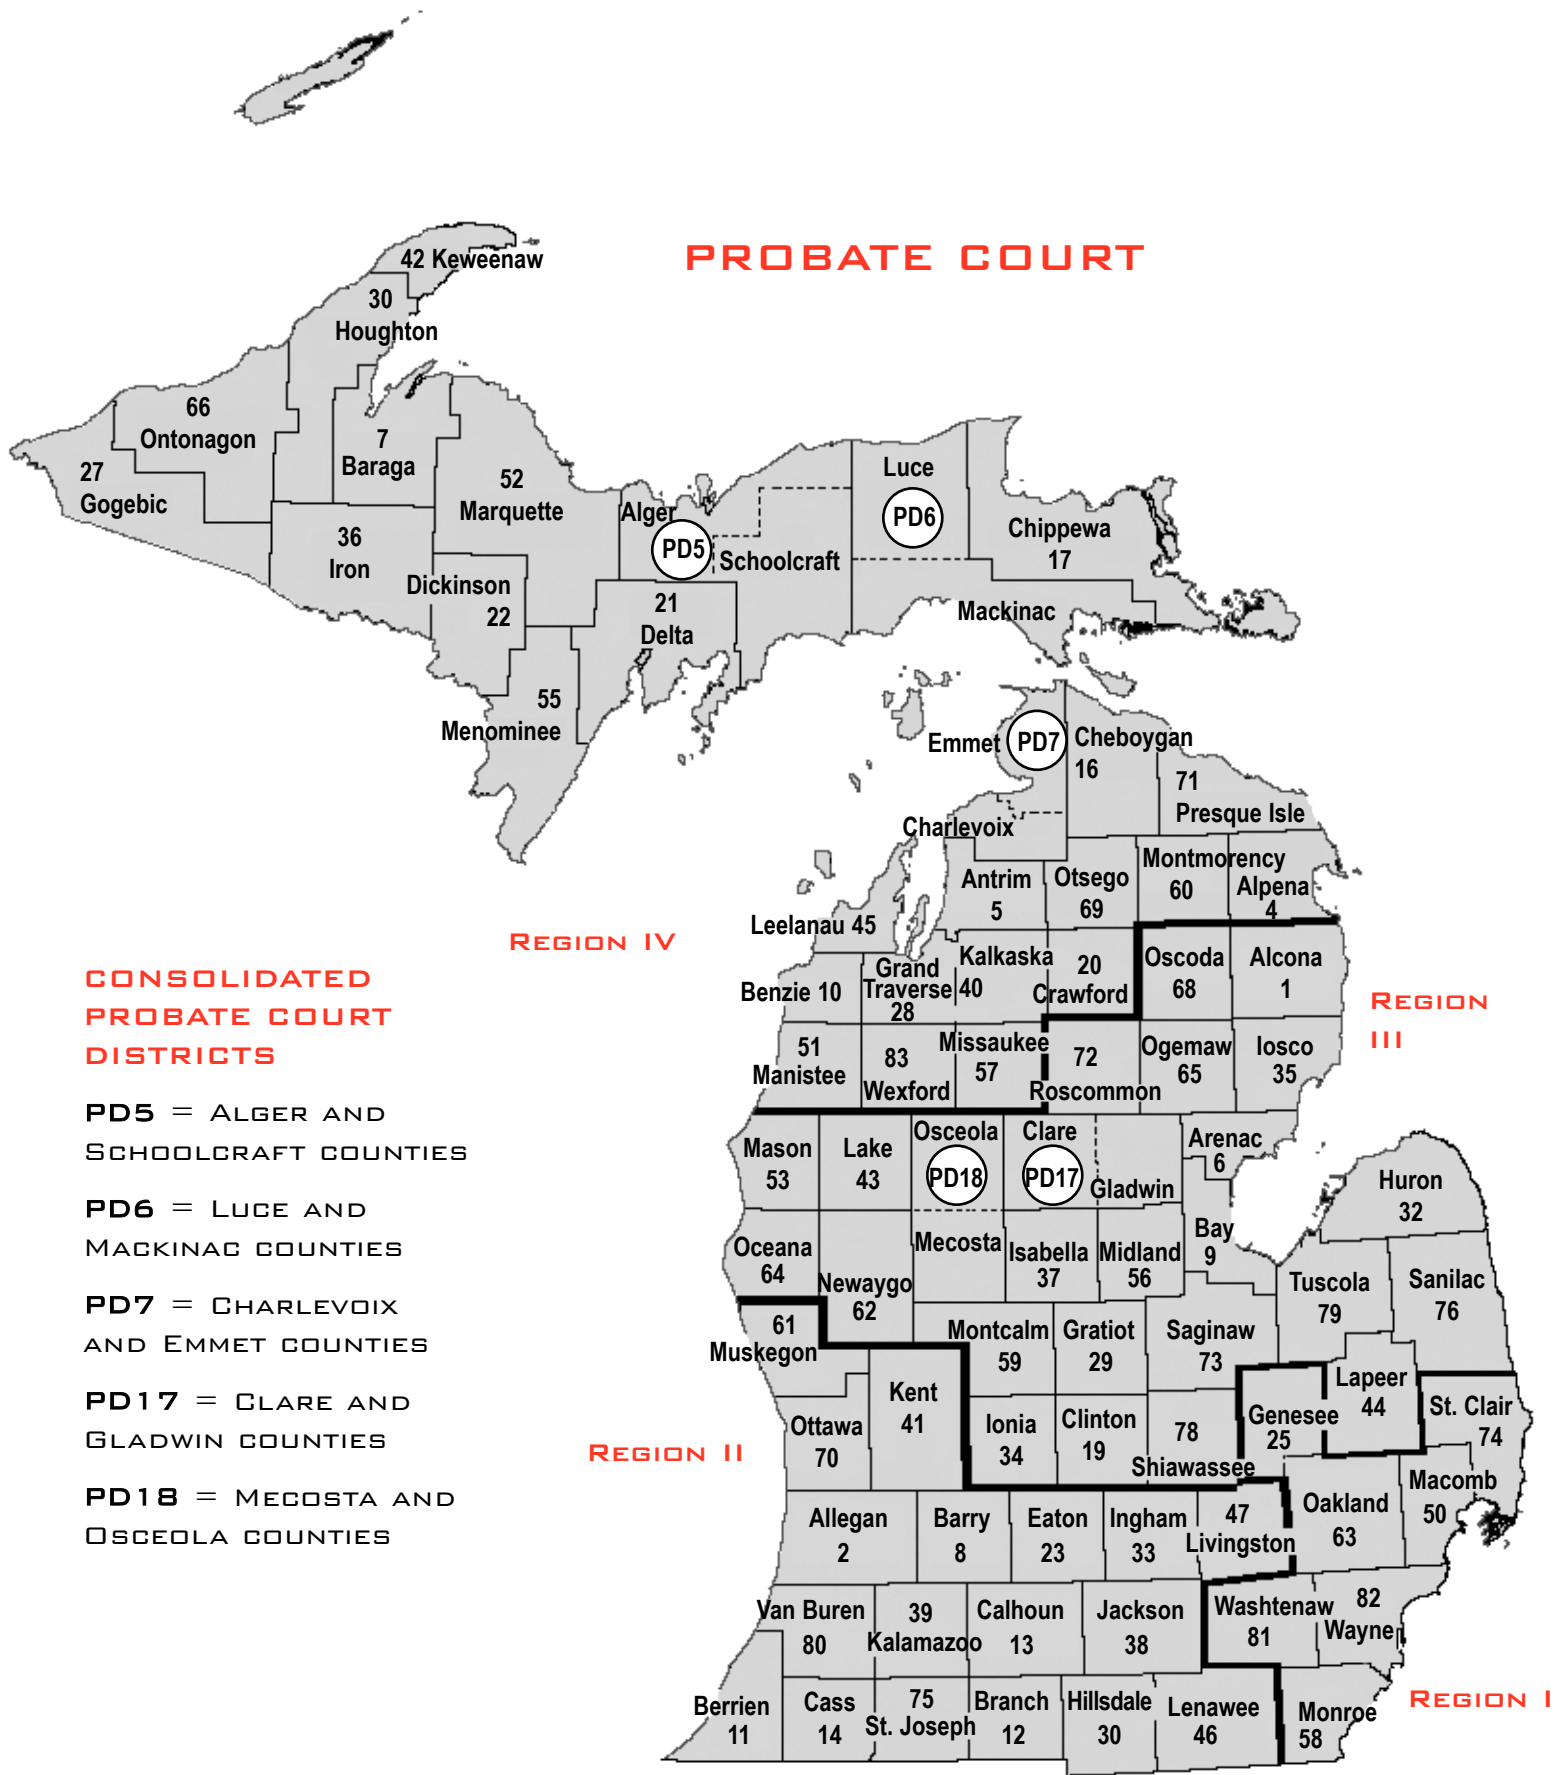

Probate judges are elected to six-year terms on a nonpartisan ballot, subject to the same requirements as other judges. The Legislature sets the salary for probate judges.

CASELOAD TRENDS ANALYSIS

In 2002, the State Court Administrative Office (SCAO) revised the way Michigan trial courts report their caseloads. This change may affect trend analysis that includes data from previous reporting years. In addition, the number of reported case types increased. These reporting changes provide a more precise view of case processing by presenting new filings and pending caseload separately from the total active caseload. The changes also make comparison with data collected before 2002 more difficult. Comparing the number of open (active) cases from year to year provides some useful information about caseload trends.

Before 2002, probate court caseloads were reported by individual case type. However, case filings were reported based on the number of fiduciaries rather than the number of petitions. Beginning in 2002, probate courts continued to report their caseloads by individual case type, but now the new filings represent the number of petitions. The Probate Court Statistical Supplements provide additional detailed information. These supplements contain a summary report and a detail report of the caseload for each probate court. The summary report presents caseload in broad categories, while the detail report presents caseload data by each case type code.

Before 2002, probate courts reported only the number of new filings and the number of active cases. Beginning in 2002, probate courts began reporting reopened cases and the dispositions associated with new filings and reopened cases. As with circuit and district courts, probate courts now report dispositions in cases that have been adjudicated. In many probate court cases, adjudication occurs relatively early; however, once a case is adjudicated, it often remains active for years and the court continues to monitor it. Therefore, in addition to reporting filings, the probate courts provide the number of active estate and trust cases and the number of individuals who have a guardian or conservator. Probate courts also report the number of estate cases for which they provide supervised administration during a given year. These numbers give a more complete picture of the probate courts' total caseload in a given year.

Before 2001, Small Estates were referred to as Assignment of Property.

In 1998, the Legislature enacted the Estates and Protected Individuals Code, effective April 1, 2000. Since then, the number of estates requesting supervised administration has decreased, while the number of estates requesting unsupervised administration has increased. Between 2001 and 2005, an average of 657 estates per year requested supervised administration in the initial petition. By contrast, the number of estates requesting unsupervised administration in the initial petition rose to an average of 18,070 per year for the same period.

In addition to new filings, probate courts' active pending caseload is used to assess the courts' judicial and administrative workload. Of the 38,512 active estates and trusts at the end of 2005, 3,743 were supervised at some point during the year. In 661 of these estates, supervision was requested when the case was filed. Probate courts also conducted follow-up procedures associated with the administration of these open estates.

Before 2002, these numbers included trusts registered and wills filed for safekeeping. Beginning in 2002, these numbers also included wills delivered after the death of a testator.

In 2005, the courts reported 11,348 wills filed for safekeeping and wills delivered after the death of the testator. The courts also registered 109 trusts.

PROBATE COURT CIVIL CASE FILINGS

DISTRICT COURT

The district court is often referred to as “The People’s Court,” in part because citizens have more contact with the district court than any other court in the state, and in part because many citizens go to district court without an attorney. The district court has exclusive jurisdiction over all civil claims up to $25,000, including small claims, landlord-tenant disputes, land contract disputes, and civil infractions. The court may also conduct marriages in a civil ceremony.

The district court small claims division handles cases up to $3,000. In these cases, the litigants waive their right to a jury and attorney representation. They also waive rules of evidence and any right to appeal the district judge’s decision. If either party objects, the case is heard in the general civil division of the court where the parties retain these rights. If a district court attorney magistrate enters the judgment, the case may be appealed to the district judge.

Civil infractions are offenses formerly considered criminal, but decriminalized by statute or local ordinance, with no jail penalty associated with the offense. The most common civil infractions are minor traffic matters, such as speeding, failure to stop or yield, careless driving, and equipment and parking violations. Some other violations in state law or local ordinance may be decriminalized, such as land-use rules enforced by the Department of Natural Resources and blight or junk violations. No jury trial is allowed on a civil infraction, and the burden of proof is by a preponderance of the evidence instead of beyond a reasonable doubt. Most of these cases are handled in an informal hearing before a district court magistrate, although by request or on appeal the case will be heard by a judge.

District courts handle a wide range of criminal proceedings, including misdemeanors where the maximum possible penalty does not exceed one year in jail. In these cases, the court conducts the initial arraignment, setting and acceptance of bail, trial, and sentencing. Typical district court misdemeanor offenses include driving under the influence of intoxicants, driving on a suspended license, assault, shoplifting, and possession of marijuana. The district courts also conduct preliminary examinations in felony cases, after which, if the prosecutor provides sufficient proofs, the felony case is transferred to the circuit court for arraignment and trial. The district courts also handle extradition to another state for a pending criminal charge, coroner inquests, and issuance of search warrants. The court may appoint an attorney for persons who are likely to go to jail if convicted and cannot afford legal counsel.

District court judges may allow clerks to accept admissions of responsibility to civil infractions, guilty pleas to certain misdemeanor violations, and payments to satisfy judgments. For little or no cost, clerks have a variety of district court forms for the public. Clerks may not give parties legal advice. Many citizens interact most frequently with clerical staff, particularly on traffic civil infractions when no hearing is requested. Clerical staff are required by law to provide information to various state agencies, such as the Department of State on motor vehicle violations and the Department of State Police on criminal convictions.

Most district courts have a probation department to follow up with persons who are on probation for an offense. A judge can order a defendant to fulfill various conditions, including fines, classes, and treatment or counseling. With some exceptions, probation cannot exceed two years.

District judges have statutory authority to appoint a district court magistrate. Magistrates may issue search warrants and arrest warrants when authorized by the county prosecutor or municipal attorney. They may also conduct arraignments and set bail, accept guilty pleas to some offenses, and sentence most traffic, motor carrier, and snowmobile violations, as well as animal, game, and marine violations. If the district court magistrate is an attorney licensed in Michigan, the magistrate may hear small claims cases. At the direction of the chief judge, the magistrate may also perform other duties as specified in state law.

District judges are elected to six-year terms on a nonpartisan ballot, subject to the same requirements as other judges. The Legislature sets the salary for district judges.

CASELOAD TRENDS ANALYSIS

In 2002, the State Court Administrative Office (SCAO) revised the way Michigan trial courts report their caseloads. This change may affect trend analysis that includes data from previous reporting years. In addition, the number of reported case types increased.

Before 2002, district court caseloads were reported under the broad categories of felony, misdemeanor, non-traffic civil infraction, traffic misdemeanors and civil infractions, traffic alcohol offenses, general civil, small claims, summary proceedings, and parking. Beginning in 2002, caseloads are now reported by individual case type. These individual case types are combined so that data reported after 2001 may be compared against categories from previous years. The District Court Statistical Supplements provide additional detailed information. These annual supplements contain both a summary report and a detail report of the caseload for each district court. The summary report presents caseload in the broad categories published in previous years' reports, while the detail report presents the caseload data by each case type code.

Before 2002, cases were reported as disposed by judge, by magistrate, or by clerk. Beginning in 2002, case dispositions are now reported by the method of disposition, such as verdicts, pleas, dismissals, defaults, or other method. Case dispositions also now include cases that become inactive due to circumstances outside the court's control, such as a criminal defendant's failure to appear in court, or bankruptcy proceedings that stay a civil case. Such cases do not reappear in caseload statistics until designated events occur, such as arraignment on the warrant. At that point, the case is considered opened. The current time guidelines criteria are from case initiation to case adjudication. As a result, caseload reports provide a more precise pending caseload, as well as accurate measures of how long cases are before the court and how long it takes to resolve them. To compare total dispositions reported after 2001 to numbers reported in previous years, one must subtract cases disposed of as inactive.

A map of Michigan showing its 83 counties and their corresponding judicial districts. The map is divided into four regions, labeled in red: REGION I (southeast), REGION II (southwest), REGION III (east), and REGION IV (northwest). Each county is labeled with its name and district number. Some counties have a star symbol, indicating a specific location or feature. The map also shows the Great Lakes and the state's borders with Canada and Wisconsin.
